31. The Austin Paintings are critical to the sale of food and beverages at Artego and Artego's profits can be directly attributed, in large part, to this atmosphere and environment created by the Austin Paintings.

Artist Agreement and Additional Paintings

32. On December 23, 2015, Austin and Defendant Perez signed an "Artist Agreement" allowing eight of Austin's original paintings to be displayed and offered for sale inside Artego. These eight paintings make up a portion of the Austin Paintings.

33. The 2015 Agreement noted that while the paintings were an "intricate part of the décor of Artego Pizza, Alexander Austin will retain sole ownership of any unsold artworks."

34. The minimum sale prices for the eight paintings listed in the 2015 Agreement ranged from $2,500 to $5,000.

35. The 2015 Agreement required Perez and Artego to display art plaques with a description of the retail price and artist contact painting for each individual painting.

36. Perez has purchased additional Austin Paintings. These purchased paintings make up another portion of the twenty-five Austin Paintings.

37. Austin provided additional paintings which were not covered by the 2015 Agreement to remain in Artego on a temporary basis.

Defendants' Illegal Activity

38. Sometime in late 2016 or early 2017, Austin learned that Perez and Artego breached the 2015 Agreement by refusing to display the Austin Paintings with attributions to Austin and by removing the existing art plaques which Austin had placed himself.

39. At this point in time, Austin was been banned from entering Artego and currently is banned to this day.

40. On March 7, 2017, through counsel, Austin sent a letter to Perez and Artego notifying them that they had breached the 2015 Agreement and demanded the return of the unsold Austin Paintings along with an accounting of those which had been sold ("March 7th Letter").

41. The March 7th Letter also made it clear that Austin was revoking any permission that Perez and Artego had to display any of the Austin Paintings both in the store or online. The letter notes that continued display would constitute willful copyright infringement.

42. On March 27, 2017, Austin sent a second letter to Perez reaffirming the March 7th Letter and again demanded the return of the Austin Paintings ("March 27th Letter").

43. On April 13, 2017, Perez met with Austin's counsel in response to the letters.

44. No resolutions were reached at the April 13th meeting and Austin's attorneys again reaffirmed the demands made in the March 7th and 27th Letters including the removal and return of the Austin Paintings.

45. Near midnight that same April 13, 2017 day, after failing to reach resolution with Austin's attorneys, Perez went to Austin's home.

46. Upon information and belief, Perez went to Austin's home to force or coerce Austin to sign over all rights to the Austin Paintings to Perez and Artego.

49. Despite Austin's repeated attempts, Perez and Artego have refused to return Austin's paintings or provide an accounting of sales.

53. Instead, Artego's website, which contain numerous Austin Paintings, has the following copyright notice: (c) Copyright Artego Pizza, Kansas City, Missouri.
